

Shatrella B. Washington-Hubbard, Ph.D.

Dr. Washington-Hubbard is an entrepreneur and educator with experience in secondary and post-secondary learning environments. Dr. Hubbard has instructed courses in the areas of business administration, business technology, human resources, and organizational leadership on the high school, technical college, and university levels. In addition to teaching in formal education settings, Dr. Hubbard has instructed and facilitated various learning programs and workshops in informal education settings, such as youth shelters and homeless shelters.

Prior to her tenure in education, Dr. Washington-Hubbard served in various positions in insurance and human resources. Dr. Washington-Hubbard continues to consult for various companies in the areas of training and development and develops online content for organizations to use in training their workforce. Additionally, she is a career and executive coach. Her coaching expertise is in women's leadership development.

Dr. Washington-Hubbard's research and writings have garnered acceptance to present for the Technical College System of Georgia's Leadership Conference; the Adult Education and Research Conference, and the Annual Sources of Educational Excellence Conference sponsored by Georgia State University's Alonzo A. Crim Center for Urban Educational Excellence. Her research focuses on the entrepreneurial mindset and women's career development.

Dr. Washington-Hubbard currently serves as the Swinton A. Griffith III dean of the College of Business and Communication at Brenau University. She has a doctor of philosophy in learning, leadership, and organization development from the University of Georgia, masters in human resources from the University of South Carolina, and a bachelor of business administration with a major in risk management and insurance from Georgia State University.