

STEVE WITTRY

Relationship Edge Consulting, LLC

Steve Wittry has a passion for leadership and helping others with the process of discovering, understanding and leveraging their own leadership potential to drive optimal, sustainable results in their own lives and in teams. Steve believes that relationship is the key component of leadership and that communication is the lifeblood of relationship.

Steve has established a reputation as a leader whose style is to listen more than talk and probe to understand, demonstrating genuine caring and consistently earning the trust of those he engages with. He employs this style to lead others through the process of making the connection between the strength of relationships and the ability to influence others to achieve results. Steve's mindset is that the ability to develop, nurture and repair relationships is a skillset that those in leadership positions must continually hone to maximize the quality and scope of their influence.

Experienced in leading teams, coaching performance and development, Steve has served in a number of roles with several major corporations in the retail industry including corporate, stores and logistics roles. In these roles Steve has worked closely with both senior and junior-level executives.

Steve is a firm believer in the power of relationship-building to transform lives and drive results at both the personal and professional level. He has been fortunate to have been shaped by many learning experiences throughout his professional as well as in his personal life. Karen, his wife of 37 years, has been a tremendous partner in his growth, contributing to the learning process of how to make things work in partnership.

It is this passion for helping people grow in their ability to lead themselves and others to new levels in their relationships that energizes Steve and he looks forward to any opportunity to engage with others in this supportive and developmental endeavor.